EVANS RECEIVES
COPY OF REPORTS

Original Edition of First Volume of Kentucky Law Records Given to Dean by R. B. Waddle

Dean Evans, the faculty and 12 students of the Law College, attended the meeting of the Kentucky State Bar Association, held April 9 and 10 at Somerset.

An original copy of the first volume of law reports ever made in Kentucky has been presented to the law school by R. B. Waddle.

This book is of especial interest to residents of Lexington because it was published here in 1803 at the press of John Bradford. Thomas Todd and James Hughes undertook the publication of the early decisions in Kentucky, which until that time were required to be filed but not published. It was necessary for them to reimburse themselves entirely from the sale of the reports. The first volume was published by Mr. Hughes alone at a loss of several hundred dollars. Colonel Todd having withdrawn from the project, Mr. Hughes was an eminent land lawyer at Lexington and the first volume deals only with land cases. The first part of it contains decisions of the old Supreme Court of the district of Kentucky, the first case being of the date of 1785. The volume contains cases decided between the years 1785 and 1801. There were no syllabi to the cases and the index was very meager, but the publication of the volume aroused a great deal of popular attention, and later on provision was made for the printing of the Kentucky reports at the expense of the state.

KOPPIUS TO ADDRESS

Dr. Otto Koppius of the physics department will address the members of Phi Mu Epsilon, honorary mathematics fraternity, at their meeting at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in room 109, McVey hall. His subject will be "The Course of Deep Bore Holes." All persons who are interested in this subject are invited to hear this talk which will precede the regular business session of the fraternity.

MISS GAY TO SPEAK

Miss Elizabeth Gay, instructor of English, will speak at 8 o'clock tonight at the Lexington Y. W. C. A. on "The Outstanding American Authors of Fiction." Miss Gay's talk will be the last of a series on "Current Events and Book Reviews."

Nominations Must Be Given to Dean

Nominations for Queen of the May must be turned in to the office of the Dean of Men not later than 12 o'clock noon Thursday afternoon. Vernon Chandler, president of Sukey, announced that the nominations would be turned in at the Kernel office but since it is necessary to check the scholastic standings of the nominees the nominations will be turned in to the dean.

The annual May Day at the university will be held Friday, May 1, when the Queen of the May and her attendants will lead the parade of fraternity floats and when coronation ceremonies for the Queen will be held. The nominating petitions must be signed by 20 men students of the university.

Kentuckian Plays
Works of Masters
at Vespers Sunday

Eminent Pianist Renders Selections by Chopin, Bach, Debussy, Liszt

Herbert L. Newman, eminent pianist and a teacher of music at the Cincinnati College of Music, presented a piano recital Sunday in Memorial hall at the first regular vesper service hour following the Easter holidays. A large audience attended Mr. Newman's recital. Mr. Newman presented a program composed of the great masters' works. The concert was divided among compositions by Bach, Chopin, Debussy and Liszt. Pachelbel, Opus 2, by Schumann, was one of the best received numbers by an appreciative audience. It was given an artistic treatment by the pianist. This piece was the only Schumann composition to be played. The interpretation given to the Debussy numbers by the artist was one of delightful playfulness. The applause given was an indication of the pleased listeners. "La Campanella," Liszt, was the last number on the program. Dr. Newman played it with a finesse that made it a beautiful performance. Although taking many bows, Mr. Newman did not play any encores.

The program follows: Choral Prelude in D minor, Opus 1, by Schumann; Adagio from the Organ Sonata in C, by Bach-Busoni; Cigue from the French Suite in G, by Bach.

Papillons, Opus 2, by Schumann. Ballade in G minor, Nocturne in F sharp, Chopin; Etude in F, The Enchanted Cathedral, Serenade of the Doll, Gold Fish, Debussy.

Sonetto 104 del Petrarca, Liszt; La Campanella, Liszt. Mr. Newman, the son of Dr. Herbert Newman of Versailles, began his musical studies at the age of 16, under Frederick J. Hoffman.

Visiting High School Students
Consider University Life Great

A. A. DAUGHERTY
That it is a great life at the University of Kentucky is the consensus of opinion of the boys and girls who during the past several days have been guests of the university in the annual celebration of High School week.

Impressions are various as to what one thing makes the university so delightful, but the abundance of pretty girls, strong, silent men, the air of hospitality, and the athletic plant seem to rank high as factors creating a favorable prospect.

One husky youngster thought that the food served in the Commons was enough to justify a person's liking the place. Several seemed to think, though, that it would give one more composure if the cashier didn't go to so much trouble over a single trayful.

Almost all of the visitors wondered how anyone could find his way about when his classes were scattered all over the campus. "Like a woods full of crazy cow-paths," observed one perplexed agrarian. Some prep school football stars openly voiced surprise when Floppy Forquer walked by unattended by a flock of girls. A few admitted that they had expected to find freshmen shining upper-classmen's shoes, leading cats by strings, and otherwise abjectly employed.

The members of a male quartet expressed disappointment regarding the speed of the college flappers, while a group of representatives from a convent boarding school confessed that they were overwhelmed by the speed of the boys. Undisguised incredulity was evident when a band of debaters from

KENTUCKY TEAM

Pitching by Paul McBrayer Is Good, but Support Is Lacking

BIG BLUE TO MEET SAME TEAM TODAY

Michigan and St. Xavier to Play 'Cats Thursday and Saturday

The University of Wisconsin baseball team defeated the University of Kentucky 9 to 2 yesterday afternoon in the opening game of the season on Stoll field. Poor fielding on the part of the Big Blue played a large part in the defeat.

Wisconsin will play again tomorrow on Stoll field and Thursday the Wildcats will meet the University of Michigan here. They will journey to Cincinnati Saturday where they will meet St. Xavier.

In the first two innings of yesterday's game neither team scored. In the third inning Kentucky got two hits, one when Hogue singled down the third base line, and the other when Ellis Johnson, singled through the pitcher's box.

Starting in the fourth inning the Wisconsin Badgers opened up and made four runs. They were made on one hit, coupled with three errors. Hits by Poser and Cusiner in the seventh brought in two more runs for the Badgers. Kentucky retaliated with two runs in their half of the seventh when Kelly and Barnes clouted two clean hits.

Ragged fielding by players at shortstop and third base and inability to hit behind the beautiful pitching of Paul McBrayer accounted for the Wildcats' defeat.

In the fourth inning, Smilgoff reached first base on an error by Hogue. Poser and Cusiner each hit safely filling the bags. Schneider reached first base on an error by Urbaniak. Smilgoff scoring. Griswald, the next man up hit a two-bagger scoring Poser. Two men came home on an error by Urbaniak. Four runs, one hit, three errors.

Wiener, of Wisconsin, got on base through an error by Urbaniak. The inning featured Poser striking out Hogue, Barnes, and McBrayer.

In the sixth bracket, Lusby hit through shortstop for a single. Fries got to first on an error by Hogue who fumbled an easy one. Wiener was walked, filling the bases. Schendel was put out by Johnson. No runs, one hit, one error. For the Wildcats, Urbaniak was the only one to get a hit.

Smilgoff reached first on an error by Urbaniak. Poser hit safely and Smilgoff went to third. Cusiner got a hit through short stop bringing in two runs. Two runs, two hits, one error.

For Kentucky, Kelly hit through second. Hogue was walked. Barnes hit to left field bringing in Hogue and Orr. Orr goes to center field for Trotter. Two runs, two hits, no errors.

Fries started the eighth inning with a hit through Kelly and got to first safely. Wiener reached first on fielder's choice. Fries is out at second. Wiener was safe at third. Smilgoff hit to left field for a triple. Wiener and Fries scoring. Bach is substituted for Kentucky. Smilgoff scores on Poser's sacrifice. Carney singled for the 'Cats only hit. Neither side scored in the last inning.

The lineup and summary: Wisconsin—Wiener, center field; Schendel, shortstop; Smilgoff, catcher; Poser, pitcher; Cusiner, second base; Schneider, first base; Lusby, left field; Griswald, third base; Fries, right field. Kentucky—Johnson, second base; Kruger, first base; Urbaniak, third base; Worthington, left field; Kelly, right field; Trotter, center; Hogue, shortstop; Barnes, catcher; McBrayer, pitcher.

Substitutions—Wisconsin: Blankney for Cusiner; Kentucky: Orr for Trotter; Toth for Kruger; Bach for McBrayer, and Carney for Worthington.

Struckout: By McBrayer, 3; by Poser, 3.

ASHAMED TO ADMIT IT

Have you ever noticed how many students boast of the little amount of work that they do, how they "never crack a book," how they propound upon the theory that college is merely a social institution, and then, having heard them, looked at their standings? It is very odd, but nevertheless it seems that these eternally indolent collegians make the best student standings. Their eternal indolence is merely a sham, covering earnest study because they are ashamed to admit it.

There are very few students who will willingly admit that they spend a good portion of their time following scholastic endeavors. Many of their professors receive impression that they are just uninterested observers or classroom sitters. It is a shame that such a state of conditions must exist, yet it seems that it is merely a custom created by some older student body and upheld by precedent. The Engineer, Law and Commerce students are the only ones on the campus who cheerfully and proudly admit that they study. They are to be highly commended for their independence of thought and expression.

The Kernel is condoning the fact that in this age of independence the average college student allows such an old and useless precedent overrun him. We also think that it is not fair that the collegian who is eternally "gripping" about his work gets the credit for working. The ones who are most unobtrusively working are classed where the "grippers" should be. The fellow who complains is far too busy complaining to work and if by chance he should work some he is too busy boasting to ever do it again, yet he is given the credit for being a "student."

We think that if professors would cruelly expose some of these self-made loafers and "get wise" to some of these overly ambitious "grippers," a solution would be forthcoming during the near future. In the first place if those who are ashamed to admit that they work should be stripped, of their shambles and exposed to the cruel public eye their shame would vanish with its exposure for they would have nothing else to hide. In the second place, their exposure would necessitate the exposure of the others who had been receiving undue credit for doing nothing. In the third place, if both groups would be forced to remedy their conduct and as a result next year the freshmen would not have good examples set by precedent to follow instead of the current "ashamed to admit it" custom.

BASEBALL

Unlike football, baseball is not one of the most popular sports of a university. It is a sport that only those who thoroughly understand the technicalities and the intricate plays of the game can thoroughly appreciate. There are few baseball fans who are not literally students of the game. It is a sport that is followed more widely than football in the United States.

Baseball is typically American, it is a keen, exciting game, a game which appeals to all classes. For the average person it holds the same fascination that horse races hold for the Kentuckian. Strange to say, it does not draw as many university students to attend its games as do some sports. Perhaps that is due to the fact that college people are too immersed in other things in spring to become thoroughly carried away in the finer points of a game. That is a lamentable fact, for it is a sport which offers the most interesting and exciting form of entertainment.

Today marks the official opening of Kentucky's baseball season. The team has been training and practicing for a long time preparing itself for the most successful season possible. It is ideal baseball weather, all the regular fans will attend the game, yet it occurs to us that it would be nice if we could see just one opening baseball game which had an attendance equal to those at basketball games.

Baseball is as interesting as basketball and deserves the same support and if the students turn out in full force and fight with our team we should have a conference winner. So come on everybody, let the courting go until tomorrow and spend a really interesting afternoon watching an interesting game.

WAR MADE EASY

There's no hope now for life disarmament movement.

Not when you can go to class on a sunny, peaceful morning and find an otherwise demure co-ed decorated and fitted out in full military livery that is a cross between that of a R. O. T. C. cadet and a head usher at a movie.

There is a reason for an R. O. T. C. regiment at a university and for the military men, too, but when the women take the cudgels of war in hand there is no help for it. Women have always heretofore been peacemakers, but now they symbolize the reason for a war. They are its sponsors. Here we are trying to cut down our naval armament, preaching peace on earth, scribbling off poets that say you can't play war any more, and then we turn right around and make captains and sergeants out of the women. Give a baby fire and it will burn the house up; give a woman a uniform and she'll start something—and goodness knows it won't be a sham battle.

All of which means that the power of suggestion is very strong and with all the military co-eds strutting along the campus, we are in grave danger of suggesting war, a Whangdoodle, or some other such eruption.

Any Friday now you can see our military maids around school all shined up and glorious in their uniforms with Sam Brown belts, typifying glorious, glamorous warfare to say nothing of representing certain young but thriving love affairs. All of which goes to prove that Love and War are about one and the same whether it's fair or not.—The Revellie.

AN OPPORTUNITY

An announcement to the effect that more radio talent is needed for the university broadcasting programs has been printed in The Kernel. This opens the door to many opportunities for both group and individual talent on the campus to express themselves.

That there is a future in radio is beyond a question. The people who have experience are always in demand and the training and experience can be obtained right here. The fact that advertising does pay is also settled in the mind of the public. Here is an opening to advertise your group, your organization, or yourself. The publicity obtained should be invaluable. That is making exceptions for the inevitable failures. This is an opening that few organizations should be able to afford to lose, for its returns outnumber the possible disadvantages.

One of the latest innovations has been the broadcasting of university dances. The orchestras which have been playing here are well known, people everywhere like to hear them. The publicity they give the university furthers the idea that the University of Kentucky is ideal. Weekly radio programs successfully give the radio audiences an idea of the cultural and academic side of our university life and music from the best dances in the South rounds out the impression.

Individuals who are accomplished can serve their school while serving themselves. There is a possibility of a regular university radio unit, and when that possibility becomes a reality they will be the entertainers of the station, the "drawing cards." Parents are always proud of the idea that their children are so outstandingly talented that they have the privilege of serving their university as an advertisement of its quality. Furthermore, individual pride must be taken into consideration; the fact that you can do something successfully is a big thing in your own life.

Looking over the situation we think that the broadcasting management is not only offering student an unlimited opportunity but is placing one of the most outstanding favors of the year at their disposal. It is there to take and The Kernel hopes that there are many who will take advantage of it.

WHENCE THIS FAME

Universities, it seems, are important things. The mere presence of one in a city is deemed worthy of mention by geographers and gazetteers, and is proclaimed by guide books to the credulous tourist. Streets bear its name; restaurants and stores bestow ephemeral fame upon it. Corpulent aldermen point to it with pride, and newspapers faithfully report what it does or says. In fact, each university, in its neighborhood, seems to be well-known and often respected.

To some of us, inside looking out, the reason for this fame and admiration seems elusive. The average student manages to attend lectures and read what is required of him without being oppressed by any onerous weight of learning. Lecture rooms are hard to imagine as centres of culture; nor do the courses of study lead into the so-called mazy paths of knowledge.

Is the world deluded by a deluge of degrees? We listen to men who have formidable arrays of letters tagging their names, but they are not convincing as exponents of erudition, nor do they seem the scholarly, learned professors that our school-boy imagination pictured. Faults, childishness and prejudice can be seen in them, just as in our seventh year teachers.

Disillusioned, we can only wonder from where the fame of universities has come. Perhaps we are not looking in the right place for the answer—perhaps these professors, behind their backs, write intellectual writings and do erudite deeds of which we would never suspect them. Whatever it is, whether the public has been duped or not, it would be pleasant and soothing to recapture that blind admiration which causes home-towns to gaze awe-inspired at the local college boy.—McGill Daily.

COMPENSATION

Black clouds across a driven sky,
Gray, listless, drowned trees,
And then from out the clearing gloom,
A bird's exquisite praise of these,
And my heart is full of songs.

A storm of grief, and doubt, and loss,
So black across I cannot see;
A loving hand outstretched across
The awful dark that faces me—
And my hands are full of stars.
—VIRGINIA MALIN.

THE MESSAGE

Go back and say you could not find me,
Tell them—
Tell them that I left suddenly to seek my fortune
Elsewhere,
That I was tired of drifting.
Forget
If you can, my discontented face,
Selfish smile,
Bitter heart and cruel words;
Forget that I have changed to a hideous thing.
Say only
That I have gone.
—IRMA PRIDE.

RoamiN' the Rialto with Thomas L. Riley

"Strangers May Kiss"

Here's a picture that will catch wide popular appeal to the extent that the Strand's box-office will resound with a merry jingle all week. Norma Shearer, obviously still an intelligent actress, is the star of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture which was adapted from the sensational novel of Ursula Parrott. Not having read the work, we cannot comment upon it except to the effect that the story is decidedly trashy and the dialogue is exceptionally poor. "Strangers May Kiss" concerns a wife who discovers that men are not always appreciative. Not a particularly new Hollywood formula but the excellent cast, including Robert Montgomery, Neil Hamilton, Marjorie Rambeau, and Irene Rich, performs very creditably under the smooth direction of George Fitzmaurice. The picture is handsomely mounted and costumed. RoamiN' Rena enjoyed it immensely but, woman-like, gave her reason by saying that it was worthwhile just to see Norma Shearer.

The most technically perfect talking picture is now at the Kentucky under the title, "Dishonored." The intriguing Marlene Dietrich is teamed with the muscular Victor McLaglen in this Paramount release which was directed by Josef von Sternberg. It is unfortunate that the producers obviously gave von Sternberg full reign in the direction for it is on this score that "Dishonored" fails to please. It is not often that a picture is overdirected but here we see the evil effects of that practice. "Dishonored" is so technical in structure that there is no space for drama or entertainment despite the fact that the original story, authored by von Sternberg, shows promise of much dramatic power. The plot involves a seductive spy in the late war who captures her victims through physical lure. By falling in love with a rival spy, she brings about her own destruction. However, the camera and sound effects are so revolutionary and the utter unimportance of dialogue is so striking that "Dishonored" deserves high praise as an artistic production.

"Seas Beneath"
For the motion picture surprise of the week, the Ben All offers "Seas Beneath" which features the virile George O'Brien. The Fox studios turned out a piece of work in this attraction that merits a better title. As a thrilling melodrama, it has not been surpassed for its action, a thing of which we see too little on the talking screen. Although this story also deals with spies, John Ford did not make von Sternberg's mistake of overdirection. Ford has enlivened his characters with a true ring of human beings, not director's puppets. "Seas Beneath" offers Walter McGrail, Warren Hymer, Walter C. Kelly, Mona Maris, and a very fascinating person called Marion Leasing with whose work we are not familiar. She almost steals the acting honors. There are many in the cast that we have not seen previously with an unknown juvenile presenting a most creditable performance. "Seas Beneath" tells of a "mystery ship" in the war which, although seemingly a three-masted schooner, is a battleship. Submarine warfare is also introduced very effectively. If action on the screen appeals to you, see "Seas Beneath." Rena was so enthusiastic over the fierce battle that once we had to prevent her from actually applauding.

ACRID LOVELINESS

I cannot bear the loveliness
That carries in its glow
A freight of poignant yearnings
For the things of long ago.

Lilacs after an April shower;
The rain-washed April air;
The face in the moon you taught me
With its halo of mist-blown hair.

I cannot bear their loveliness
Since they are no longer shared....
I wonder if you now can know
How much...how much I cared!

Sneers Snickers Scandal

By WILLIAM ARDERY

The Greeks Dance

If all two of our public are in a forbearing mood this morning—if you must know we are giving dear old Fiddledetheta a play.

There were at least 300 persons with whom we did not get to dance, we were angered by the mug who stood in front of brother Randall's band and panned the entertainer, we really went for the smooth presentation of Sweet Sue and the evening Bessie Couldn't Help It. A toast to the best week-end of the semester. The visitors enjoyed the drive through the Bluegrass.

We Sneer Without Amusement

Now that it is warm again we get sick from laughing at the mugs who fall for the muettes. In an observatory stroll Sunday afternoon we found every sorority porch crowded to overflowing. It must be that "Spirit of Youth" that we have been hearing so much about.

that "Spirit of Youth" that we have been hearing so much about.

Rena, Horse, Mask

Line of the week to Thomas L. Riley, who when the laundry man overcharged him asked, "Well man! Why don't you get a horse and a mask?" And incidentally a brand new Rena was seen with the gentleman Sunday afternoon. A Kappa!

Forgive Us

During vacation we decided that we were wasting our time and our talent in spading up the dirt for the tiers etat twice a week and so we decided to write a short story. We began without any plot whatever, wrote one paragraph and spent the remainder of the evening reading Kant's Critique of Pure Reason. You simply must read the paragraph:

The moon was a grey-green brightness penetrating the dark blueness of an April night. A single star stared at the world from the West and the cool wind carried the seductive fragrant odors of fresh grass. Occasionally a silver road emerged from black nothingness beneath the brilliantly white lights of a car and disappeared again as an ebullient goblet lapped the farther hill.

You would probably have enjoyed it if you had known that in the end the hero is likely to dash his brains out with an elephant hook and the heroine has to peddle apples on the street to buy morphine for the kid sister.

Spring Flower Picking

Campus gossip said they would. Then it said they would not. Then, when it had ceased to say anything at all, they did. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are now traveling in the East and on their return will be domiciled at—the Lord only knows.

THE GIRL WITH A ROSE

What could be more appropriate than to present our weekly rose to a bride. We are always happy to see the Greekettes marry, particularly when they are not Kappas.

JANE GARY

Jane Gary has been nominated and elected Rose Girl this week because, although she is not exact-

VARSITY THINLIES SCORE 77-40 VICTORY

The University of Kentucky track team opened the 1931 season in Louisville Saturday afternoon by defeating the University of Louisville tracksters by 77 to 40. Kentucky won ten of the fifteen events and in four of them took both scoring places. Five points were given for first place and three for second place in each event.

Kentucky won the 100-yard dash, mile run, discus throw, 120-yard high hurdles, shotput, 880-yard run, two-mile run, broad jump, javelin throw and the mile relay. Louisville won the 220-yard dash, pole vault, high jump, 440-yard dash and 220-yard low hurdles.

Taylor, of Louisville, was the outstanding individual in the meet. He made a total of eighteen points, taking first place in the 220-yard dash, the 440-yard dash and the 220-yard low hurdles, and second in the broad jump.

O'Bryant won the most points for Kentucky. He won the mile run and was second in the 880-yard run. McIlom Foster took two seconds was the first runner on the relay team for seven and a quarter points.

The S. I. A. A. high jump record which Brady holds is 6 feet 1 inch and the Kentucky record is 6 feet 4 1/2 inches.

Seventeen men helped in making up Kentucky's seventeenth points. Louisville had six men to place either first or second.

Taylor entered in every sprint event on the programme but was unplaced in the 100-yard dash and 120-yard high hurdles. He took his first event in the 220-yard dash. He was timed in 23.6 seconds. He won the 440-yard dash in 33.8 seconds and 220-yard low hurdles in 27.9 seconds. Fred McLane jumped 20 feet 4 inches to capture the broadjump from Taylor.

Bud Cavana made one throw of the javelin and flipped the arrow 168 feet 9 inches and did not better it on his other tries. He won the event with that one heave.

This is the first year that Cavana has ever thrown the discus. Previous to his victory in the Louisville meet, Bud threw it but four times and his efforts were good for 173 feet, which is a good distance for mid-season form.

Three of the Wildcats, Seale, Saunders, and Burres, who won first places, were sophomores. Fos-ly beautiful, she is one of our very few truly chic Greekettes; because we have never heard her speak loudly; because she is not stupid; because she knew what she wanted and married him; because she is not interested in activities; because she does not have the typical "dear sister" attitude toward her sorority; because she has never run for May Queen, Prom Queen, or Beauty Queen; because she is the sort who will grow old gracefully; because she married a Sigma Chi.

Smiling the Boys Fell Dead Just when we and Riley were preparing to demand that our staff be set in 10 point type our fair editor received a letter from a former columnist of this illustrious rag saying that we used entirely too much space in the publication and that our columns should be set in six point type. Looking into this gentleman's past we find that he was a student at the university for nine years before he found the strength to emerge into the cruel world. This, understand us, does not, in itself, merit condemnation, but it seems that in nine years one should know....

No matter, whether he likes us or not, Riley and Arderly do. This is a phonograph record.

Marriage Bureau Replaced The situation at the Kappa seraglio is no longer humorous. With Alpha Gams and Triddledeltas snaring husbands with little or no effort is seems truly terrible that THE lodge cannot, even with its highly developed machinery, entrap a single male. We sneer without amusement.
